

Irrigation, economics and the resilience of NZ Agriculture

NZARES Symposium 2015

9:30am to 4:00pm

Friday 28 August 2015

Willeston Conference Centre, Level 7,
22-28 Willeston Street, Wellington

Irrigation has an important role in enhancing the resilience of NZ agriculture. However, the construction and operation of economically viable and sustainable irrigation schemes involves numerous challenges given location specific hydrological and environmental issues, evolving technological opportunities, fluctuations in agricultural product prices and the changing policy environment.

Key Note Presenters include:

Mr Andy McFarlane, experienced adviser to significant irrigation developments in the South Island of NZ

<http://www.mrb.co.nz/>

Mr Con William, ANZ Bank, with significant experience analysing the viability of a wide range of irrigated agriculture

<http://www.anz.co.nz/about-us/economic-markets-research/economics-research-team/>

Associate Professor Sarah Wheeler, a water economist with significant experience across Australia

<http://www.adelaide.edu.au/directory/sarah.wheeler>

The programme will include invited response to the keynote addresses, a panel discussion and opportunity for all participants to engage with the issues raised in the symposium

This event is a valuable opportunity for all economists, managers and analysts interested in the future of irrigation and to gain understanding that will facilitate investment in viable irrigation systems that will benefit communities, the environment, and the nation.
